The Political Economy of Housing Development in Africa

Housing market dynamics in Africa cannot be understood without a comprehensive grasp of the political economy of the housing sector. In fact, it is important to understand the interactions between the main stakeholders that have shaped the housing production and delivery value chain, as well as what is at stake at each of the critical stages throughout the value chain. In so doing, it is crucial to explore the incentive mechanisms facing the main stakeholders in the housing value chain as well as the induced outcomes in terms of the provision of decent and affordable housing for everyone. In this chapter, we examine the incentive mechanisms with regards to the five main pillars that are crucial to building a sound housing sector and delivering decent and affordable housing for all African households (Fig. 2.1). These five pillars are (1) urbanization and infrastructure, (2) land, (3) construction, (4) informal settlements, and (5) housing finance.
