Abstract

The way we perceive language is the foundation of our social construction and individual or group relationship. Studies in sociolinguistics attempt to explain this relationship between the use of language and the importance of perception. A distinct discourse, spoken or written, can stem from different sources such as power, culture, social background, ethnicity and social status. The objective of the current study is to examine the persuasive tactics of Imran Khan's political speeches as well as the covert ideology of his party's manifesto, his political maturity; enrich linguistics possessions and his aim for democracy in Pakistan in his first speech in the parliament. Our analysis is based on Norman Fairclough's conceptions in critical discourse analysis, claiming that "ideologies reside in the texts" that it is not possible to 'read off' ideologies from texts" and that "texts are open to diverse interpretations" (Fairclough: 1995). The discourse analysis method from CDA is adopted to assess the selected corpus. The present study analyzes the 'ideological and persuasive components used in Imran Khan's speech to reveal Imran Khan's persuasive strategies. Van Dijk, T. A. (1997) Suggests to locate the discourse in public sphere to include the various recipients in political communicative event such
